

BREWERS DECIDE TO PAY INSPECTION FEES

Missouri Corporations Will Accept Compromise Offered by the Last Legislature.

STATE TO RECEIVE $220,000.

Brewers of Other States Who Are Affected by the Law May Take Case Into Federal Supreme Court.

Missouri brewers have decided to accept the compromise for settlement of back inspection fees offered by the last Legislature, according to a St. Louis brewer, who has taken an active interest in the matter and who favored paying the fees.

The settlement will be made Monday or Tuesday by attorneys representing all the brewing interests of the State. Brewers of other States, who are affected by the law, it is understood, may carry the fight into the United States Supreme Court on the ground that it is in conflict with the interstate commerce law.

The Missouri brewers will settle the claim of the State against them on the basis of 10 cents a barrel. The amount they will have to pay, it is estimated, will be about $220,000.

The thirty days' limit for the payment of back beer inspection fees will expire next Monday, as the bill authorizing Governor Dockery to settle with the brewers on a 10-cent-per-barrel basis passed the Assembly March 15.

In the last week of the General Assembly Governor Dockery had prepared two bills dealing with the inspection of beer. In one the inspection fee was reduced from 40 to 20 cents a barrel, while the other authorized the Governor to accept a sum of money equal to 10 cents a barrel in payment of defaulted fees.

After the Missouri Supreme Court declared valid the law passed by the General Assembly two years ago, a motion for a new hearing was entered by the attorneys representing the brewers. This motion has not as yet been acted upon by the court. There was a great deal of talk soon after the Supreme Court decision to the effect that the case would be carried on up to the United States Supreme Court for settlement, and that Kansas City brewers were in favor of carrying on a further fight against the law. This was denied later, however, and at a meeting of the brewers in St. Louis about two weeks ago the matter was left with a committee of five and the attorneys representing the brewers.

ACTION DELAYED ON FAIR SITE BILL.

The new World's Fair site ordinance was discussed by the Board of Public Improvements Friday afternoon, but when its adoption was voted upon, Messrs. Hermann and McMath voted against it. A reconsideration of the vote was ordered, thus laying the matter over until the next meeting, when it will come before President Hiram Phillips.

As prepared, the new ordinance gives either O'Fallon or Carondelet Parks and that portion of Forest Park bounded as follows: On Clayton road, along the west line of Concourse Drive, a distance of 2,550 feet, thence north to the east end of the large lake, a distance of 1,200 feet, thence continuing northwardly 2,600 feet to the intersection of Lindell boulevard and De Baliviere avenue.

One section of the ordinance gives the Mayor and Comptroller and the Board of Public Improvements one vote each in selecting any of the World's Fair buildings for the city's use after the fair. Commissioner Hermann discussed this point at length, saying he believed the buildings should be selected by the city before they are used for the fair.

WAS CALLED ON FOR EXPLANATION.

Reports of Irregularities in Manila Postal System Brought Director General to Washington.

Washington, April 12.—E. W. Vallie, former Director General of Posts in the Philippines, and now an Assistant Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service, was here Friday in connection with the statement in the report from Auditor Lawache, at Manila, that "the accounts of the postal service were very unsatisfactory." Mr. Vallie established the service in the Philippines and remained there until several months ago. He was called here from Philadelphia at the request of the Postmaster General to explain the facts in the case. He had long interviews with Postmaster General Smith, Assistant Postmaster Shallenberger and Colonel Edwards of the Insular Division of the War Department. He explained the operations generally during his regime.

Under his system, the post office revenues were collected and held by the postal service and the expenses paid from the revenues, the balance being transmitted to the Insular treasury.

Meantime Mr. Lawache had been appointed auditor, with instructions to continue the postal accounting system, which Mr. Vallie had instituted. Mr. Vallie said that Manila was a confusion arising from the change in accounting systems in the interim between the beginning of the War Department system and the arrival of Mr. Lawache's might have led to Mr. Lawache's statement. Postmaster General Smith said later that the further the matter had become, the better the showing it gave for the service.

MAKES AN ARREST ON HIGH ROOF.

Officer Reagan Sees Two Men Talking Down Copper Cornice and Goes in Pursuit.

Policeman Barney Reagan of the Central District made an arrest on the roof of a four-story building at No. 923 Pine street shortly before midnight Thursday.

While the streets were crowded at that point with persons returning from theater, Reagan's attention was attracted by a noise on the roof of the four-story vacant building at No. 923 Pine street. On looking up he observed two men on the roof tearing away the copper cornice. He forced an entrance to the building, and ascended the stairs to the fourth floor, where he went up a stepladder through the skylight to the roof, where the two men were still at work.

When they heard him they tried to get away. One of them ran down to the side of the roof and jumped off to an adjoining building, which is only three stories high. In the meantime Reagan was chasing the other man, who ran to the back end of the building, on which there is a slanting slate roof. On this roof Reagan made the arrest. The man gave his name as Frank Keochen. Reagan descended through the skylight and escorted him safely to the sidewalk, where he was turned over to another officer. Reagan then went back for the second man. After a brief search, he

HUSBAND DISAPPEARED IN GOLD FIELDS OF ALASKA.

Max Simel Has Not Been Heard From Since He Left St. Michaels in 1897.

Mrs. Mary Simel of No. 1203 North Ninth street tells a pathetic story of the disappearance of her husband, Max Simel, five years ago, while on his way to the Alaskan gold fields.

She says she married Simel in the autumn of 1898 in Portland, Ore., and for a while lived there. Simel was employed as a traveling salesman by a dry goods concern, but despite his tireless effort, his salary was inadequate for the needs of himself and wife. Allured by the tales of vast and suddenly acquired wealth in the newly discovered El Dorado in Alaska, he resolved to seek there a betterment of his fortune.

He left his wife in Portland, and, taking the train to San Francisco, boarded the steamer Little Penora for St. Michaels, Alaska. Arrived there he wrote his wife a letter, dated October 20, 1897, telling her that he was well and intended to start at once by steamer up the Yukon River for Dawson City.

Since receiving that letter Mrs. Simel has not had any tidings of her husband, and does not know whether he was killed by the purpose of robbery, whether he lost his life on the perilous voyage up the Yukon or whether he died later of hardship in the gold fields.

Mrs. Simel continued to live in Portland for two years, and then came to St. Louis.

She has no one to aid her in the quest for her husband and is without knowledge of the proper methods to use to locate him.

HORSE SAVED DRIVER FROM DEATH UNDER A CAR.

Ben Harrison Was Thrown Under the Fender by Collision and Was Pulled Out of Harm's Way by the Animal Slightly Injured.

Immediately after the collision, before the horse regained its feet, Harrison reached out from under the car, seized the harness, and a few moments later was pulled out of danger by the animal.

Harrison, a driver in the employ of the Lindsay Express and Coal Company, at No. 1422 Pine street, narrowly escaped a terrible death Friday morning, about 9 o'clock in a collision with a street car in front of the old City Hall on Market street.

He was saved by clinging to a fragment of the harness on the animal which he was driving.

Harrison had just delivered a package in the rear of No. 1108 Market street, and was returning to the stables on Pine street. He attempted to drive to the north side of Market street in front of No. 1172 of the Changing avenue division of the St. Louis Transit Company, which was going east. The horse cleared the tracks, but the car struck the wagon and upset it, at the same time throwing Harrison and the horse directly in its path. The force of the collision broke the traces and pitched the wagon to one side. Harrison passed beneath the fender, while the horse was shoved along in front of the car. Harrison held to the piece of harness he had grabbed in falling. He was rolled over and over, all the time so close to the wheels that a large hole was torn in his coat by the rough edge of the fender. Finally, after what appeared an age to the terror-stricken man, the horse gained its feet, and with a plunge forward, drew Harrison, who was still hanging to the torn harness, to a safe distance from the wheels. The accident was witnessed by nearby persons, who expected to see Harrison ground to death, despite the fact that the car was moving slowly when it struck Harrison's wagon, the motorist did not succeed in stopping it until Harrison had been dragged nearly fifty feet, and not until the horse had pulled him from beneath the fender.

Harrison refused to go to the hospital at once, but later in the afternoon his suffering became so intense that his employer, R. B. Lindsay, had him removed to St. John's Hospital.

Three days ago, while employed by the Kinloch Telephone Company, struggling wires along the housetops in Commercial street were pulled by a ladder, to the granite pavement, a distance of fifty feet, and escaped with only a dislocated shoulder.

TOOK UP FRIEND'S FIGHT AND WAS SLAIN.

Gambler Ed Marshall Was Fatally Wounded in Al Canty's Saloon by Bartender Sam Reinhardt—Prisoner Pleads Self-Defense.

SAM W. REINHARDT.

EDWARD MARSHALL.

In taking up the quarrel of another, Ed Marshall, known to the police as a gambler and confidence man, was shot through the body Friday noon by Sam W. Reinhardt, a bartender, in the saloon at Fourteenth and Pine streets, known as "Al Canty's," but which is running under a license issued to Charles Valentine. Marshall died at 1 a. m. Saturday.

Reinhardt, who is night bartender at the saloon, asserts that he shot after a "gun play" on the part of Marshall. The latter, just before he was placed on the operating table at the City Hospital, declared that the shooting had no provocation.

Early in the day, Marshall, and "Fly" Miller of Chicago, a friend of Marshall's, were in the rooms over the saloon. Here, it is said, Miller beat a woman. Later, Miller went to the saloon. In the saloon were Reinhardt and Charles Dawson, who is day bartender, and who lives at No. 134 Pine street.

Reinhardt, it is said, had heard of Miller's trouble with the woman, and ordered the car was in charge of Motorman O'Leary and Conductor Johnson. O'Leary said: "When I saw the man ride directly in front of the car I felt sure that he would be killed. I reversed the power and put on the brakes, hoping to stop the car, but it was too late. Price and his bicycle were picked up by the fender, and as the car slid along I saw him still astride his wheel on the fender and knew that he was safe. It was a great relief to me, for I had expected at first to feel the car jolt as it passed over his body brought to a standstill. Price and his bicycle got down off the fender and rode off none the worse for his experience."

Another lynching feared. Governor Beckham Orders Troops to Be in Readiness.

Lexington, Ky., April 12.—Captain W. J. Longmire, with fifty members of the Second Regiment, State Guard, is awaiting orders here Friday night to try and prevent another lynching.

The order came from Adjutant General Murray this evening and the men were assembled at 6 o'clock, when they received their uniforms, guns and twenty rounds of ammunition.

Captain Longmire does not know the destination of the company, but thinks he is wanted at Danville, where there is a mob ready to lynch Reuben Quinn, a negro, who, Thursday night, killed Policeman John Crumm in Danville. Quinn fell from the scene and had escaped capture up to Friday night, but he was reported to have been located at Nicholasville.

Quinn kept on opium joint in Danville and common law followers were sent to arrest the proprietor. The citizens of Danville made up a purse of $1,000 for the family left by the officer, and Governor Beckham has offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the murderer.
